After graduation she moved to Chicago to pursue her master's degree in Art, which she currently teaches at Columbia College. In college, Yang studied the history and techniques of papermaking, watercolour and of course caricature. She is fascinated by different methods of storytelling. She believes that caricature can help people share simple truths and stories with each other. Her work has been shown in "The Dorotheum" at Berggruen Museum and the State art gallery. Featured Gallery This is the official homepage for Chicago Caricature Artists. We're a group of caricature artists who paint caricatures, do live caricature sketching, do figure drawing, comic-strip and cartooning. We're artists in a class of our own.Today, wireless operator O2 in the United Kingdom announced the ability to respond to a rapidly changing wireless environment and adapt to customer feedback. O2 Group Customer Operations Director, Mark Davy, commented, "The wireless industry is changing on a very rapid pace, driven by multiple factors including a change in consumers' expectations as well as the growth and monetisation of mobile data and a large base of customers that are now able to download content across their own network. O2 is well-placed to respond to these changes and provide O2 customers
